being, but as a rule all, looking well fed and well clad, with nothing to distinguish them from their fellow countrymen in the East. Sir M. S. SHILLABEAL will allow us to give the answer that, in the opinion of the Englishman has been taught from his childhood, to despise those who "bear arms." Yet, within, we think, in desiring those concerned in the anti-opium agitation, the average man is probably as courageous as any of the missionaries or other anti-opium agitators, though it is difficult to get accurate evidence from the ordinary witness. Yet, within, we think, in desiring those concerned in the anti-opium agitation, the average man is probably as courageous as any of the missionaries or other anti-opium agitators, though it is difficult to get accurate evidence from the ordinary witness.

To give cutinely erroneous evidence is not necessarily to bear false witness. Lies in intent. Among missionaries and other anti-opium agitators, there are two classes who do not frequently merge into each other. There is the ill-educated and ill-trained man who has a difficulty in stating anything soberly, for precisely the same reason that it is enormously difficult to get accurate evidence from the ordinary witness.

Intelligence was received here by wire yesterday by Messrs. David Sisson, Sons & Co., of the death on the 18th of last month of Mr. George D. Sisson, the son of the first Mr. George D. Sisson, who was recommended by old residents of this colony, though it is many years since he played a part here. He arrived here in the fifteen at that time quite young. He was made a partner in Messrs. D. Sisson, Sons & Co., in 1862, and five years later succeeded his brother in the business, which he carried on until 1874. During that period he occupied the position of director of the Bank of Hongkong and took a prominent part in public masters in that city.
